Not illustrated. 1888 Excerpt: .sounds of quarrelling on deck, so quickly dressing I ran up to see what was the cause. Captain Grinter was standing pistol in hand just abaft the main companion, surrounded by the officers, and the larger portion of the crew; most of whom had firearms, and all some weapon or other. I reached the deck just as the Captain was speaking in a very loud voice, and the first words I heard fully explained to me what was the matter. Come on you mutinous dogs, shouted Captain Grinter, if you dare. The first man who moves, I ll shoot. As sure as I m captain of this ship. We aint mutinous dogs, answered a voice, but you re not going to run our necks into the noose, if we have anything to say to it. Captain Grinter turned to his officers, and after a minute, said, If any man has anything to say let him step out and say it. No harm shall come to him, but first let me have a few words with you. I ve not told you before men, but we are short of water, and we haven t more than enough to carry us to the nearest port, and that s Port Royal. This announcement was evidently received by the mutineers with alarm, for as not a word was uttered, the Captain continued, Up to the present time we ve taken many a bale, and doubloon from the Dons, and Mossoos,...
